That Extra Edge

Hugh O'Brian is Commencement Day speaker and comments on "leadership"

From the President

LVC is on the move, and you, loyal alumni, are responsible for much of the momentum!

Take, for example, the size and quality of our entering class. Enrollments are up 15% over last year's figure for this date, and the academic achievements of the class of 1990 are most impressive. These young people indeed are "leaders of the future" of whom LVC will be mighty proud. Thank you for your important contribution in recruiting such an outstanding class. Keep up the good work for the class of 1991.

Then there is the growing size and maturing quality of LVC's four-tiered Leadership Program: our association with the Hugh O'Brian Youth Foundation and with the Pennsylvania Association of Student Councils has strengthened our high school program; in March, our own innovative collegiate program was approved unanimously by our dedicated faculty; candid, constructive comments from a distinguished advisory committee continue to immensely benefit the middle manager's program; and the CEO Roundtable has met recently for the third time to share concerns about the solutions to the problems of "management at the top."

When it comes to sports, I have encouraging news also. Our amazing wrestlers and talented baseball and women's softball teams, which have had winning seasons, are but omens of exciting things to come in sports next year.

Finally, the retirement of our bonded indebtedness on the Garber Science Center, two years ahead of schedule, and an encouraging feasibility study report from fundraising counsel, Marts and Lundy, have generated a new enthusiasm for our next capital campaign. Preparations already are underway.

As we move onward toward our 125th anniversary in 1991, I am confident each of us will join in to make these next five years Lebanon Valley College's "finest hour."

Thank you.

Commencement '86

"Shine brightly my friends, you are the promise of everybody's tomorrow."

— Hugh O'Brian

O'Brian received an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters Degree from the College in recognition of his leadership and contributions in education.

O'Brian's Challenge

Hugh O'Brian, known to many as the legendary "Wyatt Earp," talks less about the Old West and more about leadership these days.

During his commencement address to the Class of 1986, O'Brian stressed that life presents challenging options that can lead to a suprisingly different life than the one that's planned.

And he recounted his own choices to show how a leader of the Old West became a leader in education.

He had entered the University of Cincinnati with hopes of going to law school. After one semester, he reached a crossroads and decided to enlist in the Marine Corps.

Upon completing his military service, he made a second choice, and refused a Fleet appointment to Annapolis to return to his pursuit of a law career.

While working in Los Angeles to earn money for school, O'Brian accepted roles in theater and film, which led to the television career for which he earned international fame as Wyatt Earp.

On a trip to Africa in 1958, life presented O'Brian with an opportunity that is perhaps the most significant of his life.

During a nine-day visit with Dr. Albert Schweitzer, 1952 Nobel Peace Prize Winner, O'Brian was deeply impressed with Schweitzer's belief that the most important thing in education was to make young people think for themselves.

"We discussed geo-politics, agriculture, law, space, for nine evenings," said O'Brian. "He was a great believer in the power of the individual, and believed that the United States was the only country with the leadership to bring world peace. He challenged me to bring that message home, to do something about it."

Upon his return to the states O'Brian founded the Hugh O'Brian Youth Foundation (HOBY), a program that accentuates the positive in today's youth. Through HOBY, high school sophomores with demonstrated leadership abilities get an opportunity to interact with distinguished leaders in business, education, government and other professions.

In fact, it was LVC's new focus on enhancing students' leadership skills that prompted O'Brian to accept the invitation to give the Commencement address.

"Three things comprise the backbone of leadership," said O'Brian. "First, self-discipline, the base for anything to be built. Secondly, self-respect. Believe that you can accomplish something. Believe that you are special. Thirdly, respect for others. Be a team player, accept the responsibility and challenge, and accept the responsibility for others. No matter what you decide, practice leadership in the home, for teaching the next generation."

Lindback Award Recipient

Dr. Carolyn Hanes, professor of sociology and social service, received the Lindback Foundation Award for Distinguished Teaching during the ceremonies. See accompanying article on page 5.

Robert K. Feaster, 51, president and publisher of the United Methodist Publishing House, one of the largest and oldest religious publishing houses in the world, returned to his alma mater to give the Baccalaureate address.

Here, Feaster receives the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws from President Peterson to recognize his career achievements and dedication to the liberal arts tradition.

Thomas Sylva Bangura received an honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity to honor his leadership in the United Methodist Church and education.

Bangura is Resident Bishop for the Sierra Leone area and President of the West Africa Central Conference of the United Methodist Church.

Dr. Robert A. Riley, vice president and controller, was inducted into the Rigor Society in recognition of his 35 years of service to the College.

The Rigor Society, established in 1985, honors those whose service has made an invaluable and lasting contribution to LVC.

The Commencement Day smiles of Tom Owsinsky and Jackie Newcomer say it all.

Carolyn Hanes:

TEACHER, COUNSELOR AND FRIEND

By Melissa J. Huffman '88

As Dr. Carolyn Hanes walked across the stage to receive the Lindback Foundation award for Distinguished Teaching, the entire graduating class stood up and applauded.

"I was thrilled and delighted and very touched," said Hanes. "To me, it is the highest honor I could get. It really means a lot to me."

After accepting nominations from faculty and the senior class, President Peterson selected Hanes as this year's recipient. Hanes, associate professor of sociology and social service, teaches in the honors program, the leadership development seminars and the continuing education program.

Her adept use of "multiple approaches in getting students to participate in the learning process" accounts for her success in teaching such a wide range of areas, noted Dr. John Norton, acting dean of the faculty and associate professor of history and political science.

Hanes actively meets the challenge of teaching such a diverse group of students, from full-time students to middle managers to part-time continuing education students. Students from all these areas characterize her as vibrant and full of energy. They say she breathes life into the topic and into the room as she walks in smiling, ready to tackle any subject. Hanes circulates around the room, engaging students in lively discussion and developing a rapport that paves the way for true learning.

"Carolyn makes the educational experience a fun experience. She gets along well with everybody and is flexible enough to adapt to any group she's dealing with," says Dr. Howard Applegate, vice president for special programs and dean of continuing education.

It is perhaps the continuing education program that brings together all of Hanes' talents. Applegate called her "a facilitator rather than a lecturer. She gets you from where you are to where you want to be." To female students especially, she does more than inform, she serves as a role model of a woman who is where she wants to be and who can help them get there, too.

Her keen perception of individuality allows her to direct and guide each student and, when combined with her acute counseling ability, allows students to forge this path for themselves.

Hanes volunteers these talents to many worthy organizations off campus as well. One organization has been Women in Crisis (WIC), a 24-hour-a-day shelter for abused women and their children. She volunteers her time, staffing the hotlines, counseling and training other volunteers.

"My experiences at the shelter have been very positive," commented Hanes. "One of the things that I hear a lot from the women is that it wasn't until they were at the Center that they had the courage to leave home. They gain support from the staff. In addition, they get support from the other women there. They tell each other, without embarrassment, what has happened to them. You find that a strong camaraderie tends to develop."

No matter what subject or individual she deals with, Carolyn Hanes radiates warmth and vitality. She counsels, she teaches, she guides.

Most of all, she cares.

Tracy Wenger

Another Leader Graduates

By Kathleen Thach

"Education is just about the greatest thing in the world."

That's what she's saying now, as an LVC graduate preparing to enter Duke University's Divinity School in late summer. But it wasn't always Tracy Wenger's theme song.

"If a person is talented enough and works hard enough, he doesn't need college," she remembers telling her dad. "He can change the world without college."

And she remembers his answer.

"Tracy, I don't care if you go to college or not, but at some point you are going to need that piece of paper that says you've survived four years away at school, and you've grown."

Conceding that college might be a good experience, Tracy selected Lebanon Valley for its "excellent academic reputation" and because she knew she would be able to participate in a variety of activities.

At Solanco High School in Quarryville, Pennsylvania, Tracy was active in numerous clubs. But she participated because it was fun to do everything. Today, she believes it is more important to participate in fewer things which mean something—and to participate with excellence.

However, when looking over Tracy's list of LVC activities, it's impossible to say she has participated in only a few. She's been president of the Student Council, editor of The Quad, co-captain of varsity lacrosse, vice president of Gamma Sigma Sigma national service sorority, a class officer for four years, a member of varsity basketball, field hockey and cross country teams, and a member of such diverse organizations as The Fellowship of Christian Athletes, Lebanon Valley College Board of Trustees, College Chorus, The President's Strategic Planning Committee, and the 1985 Homecoming Court.

The numerous honors she has received indicate that she has indeed participated in excellent fashion: Dean's List, Delphian Sportmanship Award, Outstanding German Student Award, Senior prize in English, Jean O. Love Award for Outstanding Achievement in Psychology, Membership in the English Honor Fraternity, Sigma Tau Delta, Omicron Omicron.

A licensed minister in the Church of the Brethren, Tracy also has served her church (Mechanic Grove in Quarryville) as pianist, vocalist, worship leader and teacher, despite her hectic college schedule.

Agnes O'Donnell, one of Tracy's English professors at LVC, calls her "an excellent representative of the intellectual, social and ethical values the College seeks to develop on the foundations laid by home and community."

Leon Markowicz, another of her English professors, ranks Tracy as one of the top five students he has ever taught. He says, "An active participant in class, she is the one to call on when all seems lost."

Not surprisingly, Tracy puts O'Donnell and Markowicz high on her list of individuals who have profoundly influenced her philosophy of life.

Dr. O'Donnell stimulated her thinking on high ideals and self identity, she says. Consequently, Tracy has come to believe the highest attainment one can hope for is self identity.

Only when an individual has acquired his own identity, Tracy believes, will he be able to help others.

In striving for the kind of self identity that will free her to help others, Tracy has chosen as her role models Jesus Christ, Martin Luther King, Jr. and Mother Theresa.

Dr. Markowicz, too, has given her an example to follow. She says, "He demands respect, and he gives respect. He says what he thinks, and if he sees something that needs doing, he does it."

Like her professor, Tracy has developed a reputation for getting things done, and she is constantly being asked to do something for someone or some organization.

For release from the pressure of all her involvement, she runs. Several miles each day. Running and participation in team sports, she explains, have been a vital part of her LVC education. In addition to the discipline it requires, being an athlete has given her insight into life. In team sports, she says, she has seen the positive results of individuals working together toward a common goal, and she has seen the negative results when teammates allow personal goals, problems, idiosyncrasies or ambition to get in the way of winning.

Graduation Day:

All of this, she says, relates to life and, therefore, to whatever lifework she chooses.

"It relates to families I might counsel . . . to businesses I might enter . . . and to committees I might run."

What will Tracy's lifework be?

She doesn't know.

But she does know she needs more education. In late summer she will begin her studies at Duke University's Divinity School—on a full scholarship. Then, in February, she will interrupt those studies to go to the Theological Hall of Knox College in Dunedin, New Zealand—on a Rotary Scholarship.

"I'm not sure if I will ever enter the Parish ministry or not," she says. "But I do know I want three years at seminary. I have a lot of questions; there are a lot of mysteries, a lot of uncertainties, and I want to find answers. I need three years to get my act together. At age 21, I don't feel I'm prepared to face the world confidently."

While some of her LVC professors and classmates may be surprised at her statement, The Reverend Earl Zeigler, her pastor during her formative years, isn't surprised at all.

"Tracy always came to my Sunday School classes with a questioning, searching attitude, and not in a judgmental way. I knew then that Tracy would be a good candidate for some kind of ministry.

"Tracy always was a leader."

Helping Hands Reach Out in Lebanon County

Betsy Greer (standing), LCCM executive director, discusses projects with LVC sophomore Robert Sherman, the 1986 co-chairman of Helping Hands Weekend. Seated is Regina Henry, receptionist for LCCM.

As crowds gathered around the dunking booth, goldfish toss and kissing booth at the local mall, LVC students in Greek-letter sweatshirts called out, "Play this game and win a prize! There's a winner every single time!" A blond-haired girl of six tugged at her mother's pantleg "Please, Mommy?" she said, "it's only 25 cents."

"Only 25 cents . . .", her words echoed, as her mother reached into her purse. And echo they did. Ten thousand individual quarters turned into a $2,500 collective donation to Lebanon County Christian Ministries (LCCM) from Helping Hands Weekend.

LCCM is a non-profit Christian service organization concentrating on the needs of the hungry and homeless in Lebanon County. Local efforts to accommodate community members include housing provisions, soup kitchens and food supplies.

Since 1974, Helping Hands Weekend has been a yearly project for students in Alpha Phi Omega national service fraternity and Gamma Sigma Sigma national service sorority. And coordinators Bob Sherman '88 and Jennifer Ross '87 couldn't be happier about this year's success story.

"It really was worth all the effort we put into it," commented Sherman, a chemistry major at LVC. "LCCM really needed the money, and we were able to give it to them."

Ross shared Sherman's enthusiasm. "I learned a lot about myself and what I could do. I threw myself into it, and I really enjoyed it. I knew we had chosen the right charity."

Students began planning for this year's carnival immediately after Christmas break, in January. After considering a handful of charities, APO and Gamma Sigma Sigma members selected LCCM because of the organization's dedication to the local community. Students in both organizations felt patrons would give more willingly if they could see where their dollars were going.

Funds raised from the carnival are expected to provide relief for the estimated 3,000 hungry people in Lebanon County alone. That's right, three thousand, according to the county commissioner and county planning offices. And with the unemployment rate in Lebanon County showing no signs of falling, organizations like LCCM have their work cut out for them.

According to Betsy Greer, LCCM executive director, the organization is committed to ministering to all those people in need. Composed of 50 churches and other volunteer organizations, LCCM sponsors a number of programs to carry out their ministry.

"The most visible of our programs is Outreach Ministries. The money Helping Hands raised will be placed into that general fund. It might be used for our HOPE and Noon Meals programs," she said.

The event took shape through weekly committee meetings in such areas as finance, publicity, raffle and auction. As students prepared for the weekend, they were also learning effective writing, managing and organizational skills. Under the direction of coordinators

Sherman and Ross, APO brothers and Gamma Sig sisters headed committees, ordered supplies, balanced a budget and placed advertising.

Greer had nothing but praise for their work. "Bob and Jen worked very hard. I watched them deal with people in a very supportive way. And the people in both APO and Gamma Sig were very supportive of the whole event. They were willing to try."

"The [students'] willingness to be involved in either organization to begin with is to be applauded," she continued. "That takes a lot of commitment. I know how much work these kids did—some cut classes and had to reschedule work with their professors just to help LCCM."

The Helping Hands commitment goes on. Next year's coordinators, Anthony Kapolka '87 and Sharon DeBoer '87, hope to raise $4,000 to benefit another local charity. "We will be looking for all the support we can get," Kapolka commented. "I urge any alumni or anyone else interested to give 'Helping Hands' a helping hand."

Scott Kirk '87, is an English/communications major in his third year with the Communications Office.

That Extra Edge

By Melissa J. Huffman '88

"We created a newsletter," Maria Montesano '86 stated with a mixture of awe and pride as she talked about her internship.

Her partner, Scott Kirk, added, "We had direct input. We created the stories—reported, wrote and edited them. The ideas were ours. As a result, the newsletter was ours too."

The newsletter, Noodle News and Pasta Post, informs and entertains a wide range of employees of The Hershey Pasta Group, where Scott and Maria served as interns to create the publication this spring. The duo edited articles sent in from six locations nationwide, while researching and writing some of their own articles for a newsletter that would be of interest to people in all areas of the company.

Maria, who majored in English and management, explained that they were involved in all aspects of the newsletter, from writing to proofreading to printing. They also encountered all of the problems that arise and were forced to solve them.

Through the internship, Scott and Maria had the opportunity to gain first-hand experience in a career area they may decide to pursue.

Scott, a senior English major, summed up the internship experience in one sentence. "You get your foot in the door of the job market and find out if that's what you really want to be doing."

That is the value of LVC's internship programs; they are a way for college students to answer that all-consuming question. "Which career is right for me?"

As continuing education student Cindy Wenzler put it. "I didn't want to go into something and then suffer the 'if only I'd known syndrome.'" Cindy, an English major, recently completed an internship with advertising agency White, Good and Company, Inc., Mt. Gretna. Cindy's internship led to a full-time job.

However, as Cindy is quick to point out, she gained more than advertising skills from her experience in the job market. She gained self-confidence, a valuable asset in any aspect of life.

Many interns voiced the benefit of personal enhancement. They discovered areas in which they excel and those they need to develop. This discovery is especially valuable when made as a student.

"This internship really enhanced my patience and understanding," said Laura Zeppos '86, a social service major who works at the Ephrata Area Rehabilitation Service. Before this job, Laura, who works with the mentally retarded, had "never even spoken to someone who was mentally retarded."

Like Laura, many interns meet new challenges and discover hidden strengths, and sometimes weaknesses, within themselves. Internships are "healthy experiences for those who have specific things they want to find out about themselves and their vocational aspirations," agreed Dr. Donald Byrne, professor of religion and coordinator of that department's internship program.

Learning about the job while you learn about yourself is what internships are all about. And, as Don Beaver, systems and accounting coordinator at Butler Manufacturing Company, which has sponsored many interns, points out, "If you're going out for a job interview and you've already done some things you are aspiring to do, you're that much ahead."

Having that extra edge is important in today's competitive job market and internships are one way of getting it. As Tracy Wenger '86, an English major who interned in LVC's development office put it, "You can't beat having an internship or two on your resume."

Melissa J. Huffman '88, an English major, is in her second year as a communications office staff member and is the student assistant for The Valley.

Maria T. Montesano '86 and Scott Kirk '87 had an internship with the Hershey Pasta Group's Human Resources Department last spring. Here, they prepare a feature article for the nationwide in-house newsletter they created, the Needle News & Pasta Post.

Campus Update

McGill Appointed Sixth Dean

On August 1, 1986, Dr. William McGill became vice president and dean of the faculty.

"I look forward with a sense of excitement to serving Lebanon Valley College," said McGill. "My decision to accept the invitation to become vice president and dean of the faculty at LVC derived primarily from two things: the character and quality of the persons I met at the college during the interview process and a conviction that my own talents and abilities could serve the community well as it confronts the challenges of the years ahead."

McGill earned a B.A. degree from Trinity College in Connecticut, attaining honors in history and general studies. He received his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees in history from Harvard University. McGill comes to LVC from the Division of Education Programs, National Endowment for the Humanities, where he was a senior staff member.

In welcoming the new Dean to the college, President Arthur Peterson commented, "Dr. McGill brings to Lebanon Valley College significant personal, academic achievements, a distinguished career in academia, the church and the theater, and a personal commitment to liberal arts education, which will be of immense value to the college in the years ahead. We are indeed most fortunate to have him join the LVC faculty."

A member of Phi Beta Kappa, McGill served as a professor of history at Western Maryland College, Alma College and Washington and Jefferson College, where he also served as dean of the college.

"The strength and vitality of a college depends on its clarity of purpose and the morale of its faculty. Only with a clear sense of purpose can a college make wise decisions about curriculum. And only with a vigorous and committed faculty can such decisions bear fruit for its students. The faculty is a college's most precious resource."

He was ordained to the diaconate in the Episcopal Church in 1973 and to the priesthood in 1974. He currently serves as an adjunct clergyman at St. Mark's Church in Washington, DC. In addition, he is an avid actor, having had roles in more than thirty plays, most of them leading roles. He has directed seven plays and is a member of the Washington Theater Wing. He has developed a script, based on the writings of C. S. Lewis, for a one-man show, which McGill plans to perform.

Dr. McGill is married to the former Ellen Atkinson Buck. They have three children, Sara Louise, Susan Elizabeth and Alison Marcia.

New Vice President

Preston H. Hadley III joined LVC as the vice president for institutional advancement in June.

Hadley has served as vice president for institutional advancement at Alvernia College, Reading, which has just completed a $1.5 million capital campaign for a recreation center and endowment. Prior to that, he was executive director of the Cornwall Manor Foundation.

In announcing the appointment, President Peterson noted, "We are so very pleased to have someone of such broad experience joining the staff. Preston has proven skills in financial development and promotion. I extend a hearty welcome from the college family."

From 1979 to 1982 Hadley was assistant director of development for LVC, he has held other positions in higher education at Duke and Widener Universities. Hadley is a member of the Council for Advancement and Support of Education.

From 1972 to 1976, he was director of public relations for the United States Tennis Association, with duties encompassing the U.S. Open Tennis Championships.

A native of East Orange, New Jersey, Hadley is a graduate of Bucknell University. He served for two years in the Navy as a communications center supervisor. He is currently a Lieutenant Commander (Public Affairs) in the Naval Reserve and executive officer of the Navy Internal Relations Activity in Washington. A Blue & Gold affiliate of the U.S. Naval Academy, he holds a membership in the Naval Reserve Association.

He and his wife, Lydia, currently reside in Annville with their son, Preston, and daughter, Elizabeth. They are active in the Annville United Methodist Church.

"It's great to be back at LVC," said Hadley. "I'm looking forward to working with everyone. LVC is a great school."

New Scholarship Honors Allan W. Mund, Jr.

In the fall of 1987, the first Allan W. Mund Jr. Scholarship will be awarded to an outstanding LVC student for his or her junior and senior years.

To be eligible for the $5,000 per year scholarship, a student must be of high moral character, be active in on-and/or off-campus organizations and maintain a minimum grade point average of 3.0.

Allan W. Mund Sr. and his wife, Irma, established the scholarship in memory of their son, Allan Jr., who died recently of Lou Gehrig's disease. Educated at Western Maryland College, Allan Jr. served as a pilot in the United States Army before beginning a 23-year career in high school teaching and coaching.

In a memorial tribute, Clarence Beebe, a department chairman in the Baltimore County School System where Al Mund had been a teacher, described him as a man who had courage, hope and faith.

"This was a teacher who was 'old fashioned' for he believed that students should be held responsible for their actions. This was a teacher who expected students to put education first in their lives. . . . This was a man who had mastered the art of living, the art of human relationships and competencies, the art of caring, the art of helping others, the art of bringing hope and love. . . . Al Mund was a man who is to be remembered."

Karen McHenry Glantz, executive director of development says, "Now LVC students also will remember him as they benefit from the Allan W. Mund Jr. Scholarship and follow in his fine tradition."

The Mund family has a long history of generous service and financial contribution to the College. The Allan W. Mund College Center was named for Allan W. Mund Sr., who has served as a member of the Board of Trustees since 1956, provided leadership for various fundraising campaigns and served as acting president of the College from 1967 to 1968.

Leadership Scholars Named

Thirty freshmen have been selected as Presidential Leadership Scholars. Awardees, who receive a $5,000 scholarship, were chosen on the basis of outstanding academic achievements, special talents and service to their high schools and communities. The Presidential Leadership Awards are part of the College's on-going interest in recognizing and encouraging leadership skills. The recipients are:

Robert Andrew, Carlisle, PA, political science; Matthew Andris, Philadelphia, PA, liberal arts; Stephen Butz, Mifflinburg, PA, liberal arts; Dina Carter, Highstown, NJ, music education; Diane Churan, Reading, PA, liberal arts; Pamela Clarke, Lansdale, PA, biology; Denise DePalmer, Brodbeck, PA, general studies; Maria Fenty, Endicott, NY, psychobiology; Melanie Fleek, Phoenixville, PA, medical technology; Joann Giannettino, Purdys, NJ, elementary education; Michelle Grube, Akron, PA, psychology and religion; Matthew Guenther, Cologne, NJ, German; Sean Hunter, Berrysburg, PA, history; Christopher Maziarz, Trenton, NJ, liberal arts; Marliese Miller, Burlington, NJ, elementary education; Daniel Nudo, Wilkes-Barre, PA, computer science and management; Jeffrey Osborne, Bloomsburg, PA, mathematics; Amy Paszkowski, Willingboro, NJ, biochemistry; Scott Richardson, Linden, PA, biology; Toni Salam, Hazelton, PA, economics; Pamela Schaadt, Whitehall, PA, sacred music; Sherry Scovell, Bowling Green, OH, English; Brian Smith, Levittown, PA, music education; Edward Smith, Union, NJ, elementary education; Scott Sturgess, Jericho, NY, management; Stephen Trapnell, Lancaster, PA, liberal arts; Daniel Tredinnick, Lemasters, PA, biology; Jane Vail, Cheltenham, PA, elementary education, and Mary Wilson, Whitford, MD, mathematics.

NSF Award To Biology Department

LVC's Biology Department received a $15,000 award from the National Science Foundation's College Science Instrumentation Program (CSIP), a dollar amount which LVC will match. The money will be used to purchase equipment for research labs.

According to Dr. Dale Erskine, assistant professor of biology, "the equipment will significantly enhance the opportunities for the students interested in physiology"

With the awarded funds, the biology department will set up four research grade experimental stations, where students will work with four computers to do on-line data collection.

Music of High Note

Lebanon Valley College was selected as one of only two institutions in the United States to be awarded a master class in piano from the Thomas Richner Foundation, Inc. The foundation grant covered all expenses for an advanced class taught by Martin Canin of the Juilliard School of Music. Canin presented the class in April, giving one-half hour of instruction to each of seven LVC piano majors.

Big Math Attack

For the past decade, LVC has sponsored a math quiz bowl competition in which area high schools compete for the honor of being number one. This year's winner was Hempfield High School, near Lancaster, PA.

Dr. Horace Tousley, chairman and assistant professor of the mathematical science department, said, "The purpose of the event is to emphasize mathematics in the educational system. Watching the competition renews my faith in high school students and their mathematical skills"

The event is almost entirely student run. This year's coordinator was Karen Karapandza '87, a math major from Harrisburg, PA.

APPOINTMENTS

John B. Deamer, a 1985 graduate of LaSalle University, recently was named assistant director of communications. Deamer holds a B.A. degree in communications with a concentration in journalism and broadcasting. He has worked at WLBR/WUFM in Lebanon and WHTF Starview 92 in York, and as a sports writer for the Harrisburg Patriot.

Thach Directs Annual Fund

Kathleen Thach has been named director of the annual fund. The title of this year's campaign is "Making A Difference."

Said Thach, "Plans for the 'Making A Difference' Annual Fund Campaign to run July 1, 1986 through June 30, 1987 are well underway. Gift societies have been restructured and recognition awards and reunion giving programs are in the planning stages. I'm looking forward to an exciting, challenging and successful year."

Our Outstanding Young Women

Three LVC graduates recently were selected from nominees across the nation for inclusion in the 1986 edition of Outstanding Women in America.

Ann Buchman '84 is a resident of Fallston, Maryland. The winner of the Presser Foundation music scholarship, Buchman holds degrees in both music and biology. She currently is pursuing a graduate degree in biology at the University of Maryland.

Kathleen DeGraw '86 recently graduated magna cum laude with a B.S. degree in biochemistry. Originally from Pompton Plains, NJ, DeGraw is employed as an intern at Annville Veterinary Hospital and is a part-time research technician in the Pathology Department at M.S. Hershey Medical Center. She is planning to attend veterinary school at the University of Pennsylvania after graduation.

Deborah Dressler '86 recently graduated summa cum laude with a B.S. degree in biology. Dressler won the freshman and sophomore achievement awards given by Beta Beta Beta biological honor society as well as the Alice Evers Burtner scholarship award her junior year. Her career plans include teaching high school biology.

Nominees are evaluated on the basis of academic achievement, professional leadership, cultural accomplishments and community service.

Faculty Profiles

Silver & Gold

This year marked the 50th tour of the LVC Concert Choir, and the 25th anniversary of Dr. Pierce Getz as concert choir conductor.

During the performance of the choir at the Spring Arts Festival in April, students presented Getz with a silver tray, commemorating the special year.

"I was really very touched," said Getz, "and it's nice to realize that the student body appreciates the talent and creativity developed and expressed by the concert choir across the years."

Getz, a native of Denver, PA, who received a Bachelor of Science degree with a major in music education from LVC, has studied at the Union Theological Seminary and the Eastman School of Music. He joined the College's faculty in 1959.

Further study has taken him to Haarlem Organ Academy, The Netherlands, and to the North German Organ Academy. A tour of historical organs took him to France, North Germany and Holland. In addition to which he did an extended period of study in Montreal.

In addition to his teaching at LVC, Getz serves as director of music at the Annville United Methodist Church. He is known as an organ recitalist, as a leader of church music workshops, and as a consultant to churches planning organ installations. Getz is frequently invited to serve as adjudicator and guest conductor for county, district, regional and state choral festivals in Pennsylvania and beyond.

Under his direction the concert choir has become one of the outstanding collegiate choral groups in the country, winning wide acclaim from audiences with its special blend of technical skill, artful performance and appealing programming.

The choir has been heard on more than 30 NBC national radio broadcasts, including "National Radio Pulpit" and "Great Choirs in America."

Dr. Pierce A. Getz conducts a rehearsal of LVC's popular Concert Choir in preparation for their 1986 spring tour that concluded in April.

Dr. James Broussard, associate professor of history, presented a paper on "Legislative Leadership in Frontier Indiana" at the Southwestern Social Science Association in San Antonio, Texas.

Dr. Eugene Brown, associate professor of political science, recently completed a chapter on Henry Kissinger for an anthology on political leaders that will be published by Greenwood Press in 1986. Also, Dr. Brown's review of Simon Serfaty's AMERICAN FOREIGN POLICY IN A HOSTILE WORLD is in the current issue of the American Political Science Review.

Dr. Richard Cornelius, professor of chemistry, recently published a paper in the Journal of Chemical Education entitled "Student Use of Computers for Solving Problems: Tools or Crutches." The paper was written in collaboration with Dr. Daniel Cabrol and Dr. Claude Cachet at the Universite de Nice in Nice, France.

Dr. Sherman Folland, assistant professor of economics, presented a paper entitled "Advertising by Physicians: Behavior and Attitudes" at a seminar at Oakland University, Rochester, Michigan. He also published a paper in the March issue of the International Journal of Social Economics entitled "Health Care Needs, Economics and Social Justice."

Dr. Martin E. Goldstein, professor of political science at Widener University, gave a lecture on "Recent Developments and Negotiations in Arms Control" at LVC. The event was sponsored by a grant from The Pennsylvania Humanities Council.

Three photographs by Richard A. Iskowitz, associate professor of art, were accepted for a special exhibition celebrating the tenth anniversary of the Mummer's Museum in Philadelphia. The photographs were taken during the annual Mummer's Day parade. Two of Iskowitz' photos captured 1st place: in the color category, "Mummers Day, 1986" and in the black and white category, "Sculpture."

Dr. Leon Markowicz, professor of English, presented a paper entitled "The First Essay: Let Me Show You My Home" at the annual conference of the Lancaster-Lebanon Writing Council. Also, Markowicz was re-elected secretary and treasurer of the council.

Dr. C. F. Joseph Tom, professor of economics, gave a slide presentation on contemporary China to the Mt. Gretna Rotary Club. The slides displayed the natural beauty and historical landmarks of China, while Tom provided commentary on the great change in the Chinese economy since he visited China in 1979.

Dr. Stephen Williams, professor of biology, spoke at the first installation ceremony of the Rho Epsilon chapter of Beta Beta Beta Biological Honor Society at Shippensburg State College. Williams lectured on his research on the capture mechanisms of the Venus flytrap which received international attention during the past few years and is now included in botany and plant physiology textbooks.

Dr. Paul Wolf, professor of biology, published an article in the professional journal Estuarine, Coastal and Shelf Science entitled "Carbon Balance in a Salt Marsh: Interactions of Diffusive Export, Tidal Deposition and Rainfall-caused Erosion."

Alumni News

Tavani Named Director

Frank Tavani, Jr., '76, was recently named director of alumni relations and parents programs.

Tavani, who earned a B.A. degree in psychology from LVC, said, "I'm delighted to have the opportunity to return and serve my alma mater and am excited about the new direction the College has taken under the leadership of President Peterson."

Tavani was an active member of the student body, having been a resident assistant for three years and a member of the student senate and Alpha Phi Omega, a national service fraternity.

A native of Cleona, Tavani now resides in Lancaster with his wife, Agnes Scanlin Tavani, and their three children, Liam Patrick, Meghan Elizabeth and Daniel Joseph.

Frederick P. Sample, Distinguished Alumnus, 1986

Alumni Weekend '86

Frederick P. Sample was honored as LVC's Distinguished Alumnus during the Alumni Weekend luncheon in June. Sample's professional career has been spent entirely in the field of education—public, private, secondary and collegiate. It has been marked by a series of positions of ever-increasing responsibility, from classroom teacher at Annville and Red Lion Area High Schools, to superintendent of the Manheim School District and in 1968 to President of Lebanon Valley College, a position he held for sixteen years.

A review of Alumni Weekend '86 will appear in the fall issue of The Valley.

Alumni Scholarship Winners

Ross Hoffman and Melissa Moyer each received a 1986 Alumni Scholarship. Both students will be seniors in the fall.

Hoffman, of Trappe, Pennsylvania, is a biochemistry major and is involved in Alpha Phi Omega, a national service fraternity, Alpha Psi Omega, a national dramatic honor fraternity, Wig and Buckle Drama Society and chorus. He also serves as a chemistry lab assistant and works in the Mund College Center. During the summer, he participates on the research team headed by Dr. Owen Moe, associate professor of chemistry.

Moyer, of Bethel, Pennsylvania, is a biology major and is involved in field hockey and volleyball. She works in the College's dining hall and has worked at Camp Swatara for the past two years.

LVC Ambassadors

Alumni ambassadors help prospective students get to know LVC by sharing their experiences and answering questions about campus activities and academic life.

LVC's oldest active ambassador is Samuel K. Clark '27 of Lebanon, Pennsylvania; the ambassador furthest from campus is David Blauch '84, who attends Cal Tech in Pasadena, California.

If you are interested in becoming an alumni ambassador, call the admissions office at (717) 867-6181.

Lenny's Great Adventures

Thanks to Jonathan Frye '85, D. John Grace, Jr., and David J. Padley '68 for sending their stories on Lenny the Leopard. Lenny's adventures will appear in a future issue. If you have a story about Lenny, send it to Editor, The Valley, Lebanon Valley College, Annville, PA 17003.

Petrofes: A Leader With A Hold On Consistency

by John B. Deamer, Jr.

When wrestling coach Jerry Petrofes came to Lebanon Valley College, the school's wrestling program for the 1962-1963 season was 0 and 9 and in definite need of a change.

In February of 1986 Petrofes coached his 200th victory . . . a feat unapproached by any other coach in the history of LVC.

"He really knows his stuff, he knows every angle, and he puts it all together. We had a lot of different people (wrestling) when I was there, and we won, because he knows how to win with the people he's got. He just knows so many things. He knows how to milk a team for everything it's got, and he has a lot of respect because he treats everyone in the wrestling room like his own son. It's hard to really define Jerry. He's so many things, a great guy, a great coach."

- Dave Jones '85, team member 1981-1985.

Coaching a consistent winning program is difficult on any level in sports today. Petrofes, in all his years as wrestling coach at LVC, has gone to battle only 25 percent of the time with a full line-up. Throw in the usual amount of injuries each season and the accomplishments of the program are something more than outstanding.

"Being able to coach wrestling is still fun. I'm trying to put back into wrestling what I got out of it. I've never had any aspirations of coaching in a higher division. A small school offers a bigger challenge. We've had some numbers problems over the years, but we've got the job done."

Jerry Petrofes, 1986

Persevering in the face of adversity is the only game Petrofes is used to playing. Stricken with polio at age 11 and left with a crippled leg, wrestling was the only sport that supplied an outlet for Petrofes' immense desire for competition. While the leg held Petrofes to the .500 mark on the mats, he learned what it took to be a success.

Jerry Petrofes, LVC's winningest coach

"He's a good motivator. He's an example of a kid who toughed it out, who had to overcome things to get where he's at, and all of us could see that. He wouldn't ask you to do anything he wouldn't do, and that attitude carries over. I think the value of Jerry is that he didn't always have the cream of the crop, the district champions or the state place winners, but he always got everything out of the kids. In the year I was there, I can remember how he took some kids with raw talent and turned them into something. He'd let you know what he wanted out of you, showed you how to do it, and you did it."

Neil Fashnacht '76, team member 1972-1976

The 1985-86 LVC wrestling team brought Petrofes a 17-win season, the most wins by any wrestling team in a season at the College. Rich Kichman and Gary Reesor each reached the 100 win plateau, with Kichman earning the highest national finish ever for a Lebanon Valley College wrestler, placing fourth in the NCAA Division III national championships in Trenton, NJ. LVC, as a team, finished 22nd out of 69 teams, its highest ever at nationals.

"I had a great bunch of motivated kids this past year," said Petrofes. "Every guy made a contribution to the 17 wins."

At the beginning of every season, Petrofes has told each member of his squad to achieve the highest level he can. In 1962, the wrestling program at LVC was something less than competitive. Twenty-two years later, under the leadership of Jerry Petrofes, the program is something more than outstanding.

John B. Deamer, Jr., a 1985 graduate of LaSalle University, is assistant director of communications at LVC.

LVC Football '86

The assistant coaching staff under first-year coach Jim Monos will be Frank Tavani '76, defensive coordinator and linebacker coach; Tim Ebersole, quarterback and receiver coach; Frank Reich, Sr., offensive line coach; Mark Brezitski, defensive back coach; and Thomas Jordan, defensive line.

Monos, of Shippensburg, was assistant football coach and assistant director of financial aid at Shippensburg University since 1979. Prior to that, he served Shippensburg as a part-time coach (1976-79) and was assistant football coach at Chambersburg High School (1975-76) and Sussex Central High School in Georgetown, Del. (1972-75).

Tavani earned a B.A. degree in psychology from LVC in 1976. He set two football records, both of which remain unbroken: most touchdowns in a single season and the most yards gained in a single season. He was the first player in the history of the College to gain over 1,000 yards. He was named All American in 1975 and in 1976 signed on as a free agent with the Philadelphia Eagles. Tavani is also the director of alumni relations and parents programs at LVC.

Ebersole earned a B.A. degree at Shippensburg University in 1983, and taught mathematics in the York City School district for two years. He was the offensive coordinator at William Penn of York High School for the past two years. Ebersole is also the sports information director at LVC.

Reich was head football coach at Lebanon High School from 1962 to 1970. In 1969 he was honored as the Central Penn League coach of the year.

Brezitski earned a B.A. in radio and television from Shippensburg University in 1985 and served as a captain during the 1984 Shippensburg University season. Brezitski will enter his first year in the coaching profession.

Jordan earned a BS. degree in education from Millersville University in 1976. He has been a special education teacher at Lebanon High School since receiving his degree. He has coached football, baseball, and wrestling at Lebanon High School.

The 1986 schedule includes 10 games, with six being played at home.

September 6	Juniata	Home

Foster Receives Honor

Gordon (Gordie) Foster was inducted into the Capital Area Chapter of the PA Sports Hall of Fame (Harrisburg) during the inductees banquet in May. Foster received the honor because of his outstanding coaching record that began at Lykens High School in 1953 and moved to Upper Dauphin High School in 1958. During his tenure at these schools, his basketball teams won 17 league championships, five District Three titles, and six Holiday Tournaments. His over-all record was 543 wins and 134 losses for an average of 20.1 wins per season. Foster began coaching at LVC in 1981.

Christmas at The Valley

Visit LVC's beautifully lit campus and attend the special Christmas service in Miller Chapel on Sunday, December 7, 1986 at 7:30 p.m.

The Christmas service includes the College orchestra, directed by Suzanne Caldwell Riehl adjunct instructor in music, and anthems by the College Chorus, directed by Robert C. Lau, professor of music.

Dale Erskine, assistant professor of biology (shown above), was chosen by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) to be a faculty assistant for the 1986 Space Life Sciences Training Program. He is one of two assistants selected from a nationwide search.

"This is just a wonderful opportunity for me and a real honor," noted Erskine. "My hope is to bring a lot of new knowledge back to share with my students here at Lebanon Valley College and with the community in general."

The purpose of the program is to attract young researchers to the life sciences area to help build a pool of talent in universities, industry and NASA with practical experience in space flight.

He returned from his five-week stint at NASA in July.
